In public or in private life, in majorities or minorities, at home or abroad, I intend to live and die with unrelenting hostility to slavery on my lips. Such language needs no comment from me to explain that, in the hands of these men, all of whom are shining lights in the Republican party, the institutions of the Southern States would be crushed out and destroyed. And I think that the President has very properly and truly characterised the objects of these men and their associates as being dangerous and revolutionary. At all events, the only construction which I can give these sentiments is, that slavery everywhere must fall, and our only condition of repose is to be when the sun shall not rise upon a master, nor set upon a slave. 192 CHAP. VI. THE REAL POINTS OF THE QUESTION. It is difficult to say what are the relative chances of success of the two parties, in the total absence of all data upon which a calculation of the extent and duration of the warfare must be based; but the complete failures of the two main points which were put forward as the confident expectation of the Federal Government--1. the overwhelming of Southern opposition by the crushing force of an immediate attack; 2. the starving out of the South--go far to diminish the impression that the weight of money and power lies so entirely on the North side,...
