Not illustrated. 1898 Excerpt: . . . what has already begun and what, God grant, may soon be consummated: the passing of the reflex. When to the nerve specialist comes a case of epilepsy with a note from the family physician saying that the ovaries have been removed without effect and so perhaps the trouble is in the brain, or a case of convulsive tic with the message that spasm has continued in spite of cauterization of the turbinates, or, as occurred to me a few days ago, he sees a born neuropath with typical traumatic neurosis who has undergone live pelvic operations for relief of her nervous symptoms, he groans in spirit and looks longingly forward to the millenium when the man who operates shall have or procure an adequate understanding of that for which he cuts. In the meantime, under the keen edge and rigid requirements of neurology the so-called reflex...
