Archimedes Astor Green, of Jersey City Heights, is one of those modest, retiring men who never refuse a candidacy when it is thrust upon them as a natural result of their own wire-pulling. Archimedes is, moreover, very original in his methods and happy at speech-making, inasmuch as he far oftener fits the action to the word than the phrase to the act. When he made the independent nomination for inspector of Hackensack crab nets, his admirers favored him with a serenade. Mr. Green had already put his hand into his pocket, so there was nothing to do but to lay its digits on his heart, which he did, most impressively. On the morning following the instrumental blow-out, one of the hired men, called musicians, was asked how the honored citizen stood the infliction. Oh, said the trombone teaser, he rose to the occasion, but sat down on the beers. He stood us off! The man whose education is finished is a respirating mummy. America imports British lions to growl about the country which George the Third found too hot to hold. Old Jerry Tradollar told me tother morning that he never saw his wife look so stunnin as she did the first time she whacked him with a broomstick. He somewhat mournfully added: Why, Lor bless ye, Enrique, she made...
