Nevertheless, the early development is nearly the same. Like the leaf, the apex is earliest formed, appearing first as a solid protuberance, and the anther is completed before the filament, which answers to the leafstalk, makes its appearance. At first, the anther is of a greenish hue, although at maturity the cells assume a different color, more commonly yellow. A transverse section of the forming anther shows four places in which the transformation of the parenchyma into pollen commences, which answer to the centre of the four divisions of the parenchyma of a leaf, viz. the two sides of the blade, each distinguished into its upper and its lower stratum. So that the anther is primarily and typically four-celled; each lobe being divided by a portion of untransformed tissue, stretching from the connective to the opposite side, which corresponds to the margin of the leaf and the line of dehiscence. This appearance is presented by a large number of full-grown anthers: but the partition usually disappears before the anther opens, when each lobe becomes single celled. The normal anther is consequently considered as two-celled. In Menispermum and Coccus, however, the anther is strongly four-lobed externally, and each lobe forms a distinct cell at maturity. 530. Viewed morphologically, therefore, the filament answers to FIG. 479. Plan of a stamen as answering to...
